Keep on track this Spring....

Spring time is here and with it comes the challenge of keeping ourselves and our children on track. I find myself daydreaming of fun, outside activities with summertime just around the corner. For me and my girls, springtime seems to be our busiest time of year. I came across an article by Melissa A . Kay, 7 Ways to Help Kids with Focus Issues Battle Spring Fever. The article provided guidance that I am going to implement at my house. The article reminded me that it is not just my children that need to stay focused. I should lead by example. If we work together to stay on track, I believe we will have a less stressful spring.

Change the life of a child by supporting SEALKIDS...

We receive requests for service consistently throughout the year. Parents, observing their child's struggles, reach out to SEALKIDS for hope, help, and results. We step in to help lessen the stress in the homes of the families in the Naval Special Warfare community by coming up with a plan to help each child. Some of the children we serve struggle with learning disabilities, for which there is no cure. Some of the children we serve struggle with stress and anxiety due to the deployment of a parent. Some of the children we serve just need a little help to overcome challenges. SEALKIDS steps in to provide targeted and immediate intervention to ensure these children reach their full potential. SEALKIDS relies on donors, like you, to help these children.

The average cost to serve one child is $5000.
